

2.10. Motivation for Clarifying the Term

My motivation for making precise distinctions and clarifying terms is to help us open ourselves to a spiritual reality that we have not yet experienced.

It is about engaging with curiosity in a very practical search for our own spirit and for the Spirit of God.

The impulse for this clarification did not come from intellectual reflection, but from personal experiences that revealed to me that there is much more to discover.

These experiences showed me that we often interpret and teach mystical descriptions too simplistically - because we lack access and first-hand experience.

Yet we do have the capacity and potential to find a personal access to our spirit-mind, and through it, a more direct access to the spiritual realm and to God.

For this, we first need to develop an expanded and more nuanced understanding.

Ultimately, my aim is to point to a path that is accessible to anyone - a path to genuinely experience the mystical world of spirit and come into resonance with the true love of God.
